

— WR Attempt Falls Short In Berlin —

by Sean Hartnett

Geoffrey Mutai returned to his winning ways as he ran 2:04:15 to win the Berlin Marathon a second ahead of his protégé Dennis Kimetto, making his marathon debut.

Mutai claimed his third World Marathon Major victory after destroying course records in Boston and New York in '11 before dropping out amid the sweltering heat last April in Boston, a DNF that unexpectedly cost the top-ranked 26-miler a spot on the Kenyan Olympic team.

Mutai also solidified his lead in the '12 WMM title chase with three victories in three different cities.

"For me it is special to win here in Berlin after finishing 2nd here in 2010, I have now won in different places with hilly courses and flat courses. To win in different places is not easy."

Race-day once again broke near perfect in the German capital save some off-and-on swirling winds, and after a 14:57 opening 5K, the lead pack of four pacers and five actual racers upped the tempo with 14:44, 14:41 and 14:40 segments to cross halfway in 62:12.

The pace continued to quicken with 14:36 and 14:33 splits as only Jonathon Maiyo and reigning world Junior XC champ Geoffrey Kipsang remained in the hunt with Mutai and Kimetto when the final pacer Wilfred Kirwa retired at 31K.

Beyond his own spectacular achievements, Mutai directs an ever expanding training group of runners that includes Kimetto (who set the 25K WR four months ago in this same city).

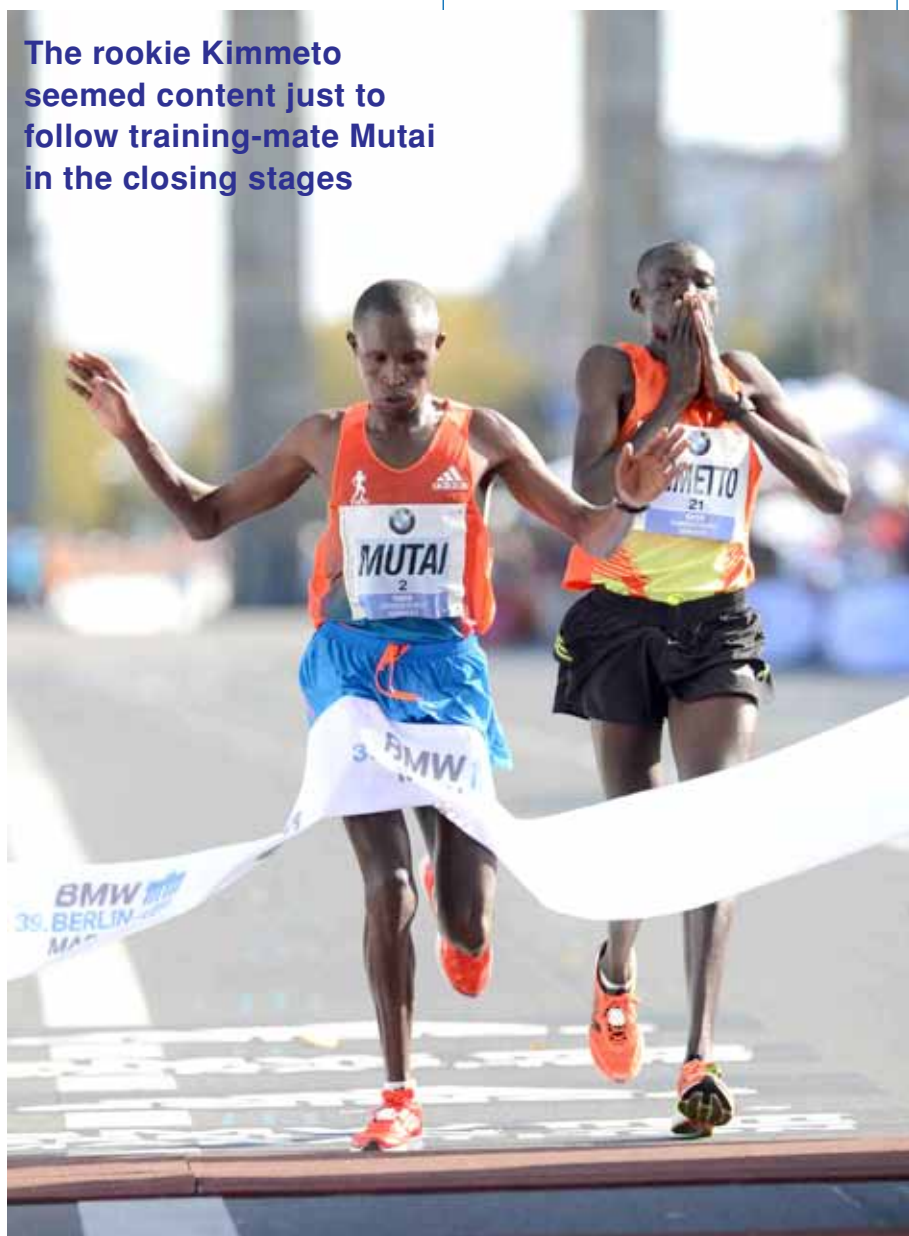

In the 32nd kilometer, coach Mutai led a demonstration in radical surging as he blasted a 2:43 kilo that dispatched Maiyo and Kipsang, and a subsequent 2:48 put the duo at 2:03:29 pace, ahead of Patrick Makau's course and WR 2:03:38 set last year in Berlin.

Yet Mutai and Kimetto's move that blew the race open may have also scuttled the record chase.

Splitting 14:19 from 30–35K, Mutai recalls "I tried pushing it like fartlek and thought maybe it was possible to break the World Record, but after 37K I got some pain in my left hamstring from the sprinting. I was having some problems and could not push the pace but I said, 'Let me just maintain to the finish line.'"

Reeling from exit wounds of the earlier 5:31 2K burst, the two athletes decelerated sharply over the final kilos as just getting home displaced any thoughts of racing to the finish. Kimetto was more than content to follow Mutai across in 2:04:16 in a tight finish seemingly devoid of competition.

Perhaps Kimetto was respecting his coach, or Mutai's claim on the $500,000 WMM prize. What can't be faulted is the effort in total, as Mutai and Kimetto moved to Nos. 4 and 5 on the all-time legal-course list, with Berlin now claiming four of the top five fastest clockings.

Third-placer Kipsang also logged an impressive debut bettering 3:00 kilometer pace to finish in 2:06:12.

For Mutai his win after being beaten at the finish by Makau in '10 was doubly satisfying. "It means a lot for me to win races while I am coaching," he asserted.

"I have almost 60 athletes in my camp and all of them are depending on me. The work of coaching athletes is not an easy task, because I am thinking about both training and coaching."

He added, "I was also very happy for Dennis because he has run a good time in his first race. He also had some problems with his leg and was just hoping to make the finish."

For his part, the lanky, smooth-striding Kimetto credits Mutai for the world's fastest debut on a record-eligible course.

"I had confidence in Geoffrey's program because it has brought him many titles," he said. "I was not expecting to finish close to him, but I am very happy with my run and in future, I will try for the World Record."

A pair of Ethiopian training partners also ruled the women's competition as Aberu Kebede bettered Tirfi Tsegaye for her second Berlin title in a PR 2:20:30.

Kebede was content to run in a pack of 4 through a 70:32 opening half before leaving the challengers behind as she upped the tempo to close in 69:58. Tirfi Tsegaye finished 2nd (2:21:19), while Olena Shurhno rounded out the podium with a Ukraine Record 2:23:32.
