

At the ages of 25 and 23, Al and Jackie Joyner have accomplished enough in track & field to fully satisfy most careers. Each earned a medal at the LA Olympics (Al the triple jump gold, Jackie the heptathlon silver) to become the first brother-sister duo to win track medals in the same Olympics.

But nothing is on hold with these two, and their future appears extremely bright. Al is back in Jonesboro finishing up school at Arkansas State. He no longer sleeps on Jackie's couch, as he did for nearly 6 months last year in preparing for the Olympics.

"I'm still a piece of coal in a diamond in the rough," says Al, referring to his knowledge of the triple jump. "I'm kind of self-taught—I did a lot of reading in the library. Bob Kersee of UCLA and Guy Kochel of Arkansas State have helped me. I have not understood the triple jump yet. But these next couple of years, I will take it seriously."

Jackie, finishing up school at UCLA, surely hasn't slowed down. After again starting on the Bruin basketball team, in late March she took up two events for the first time: the 400H and the triple jump, climbing all the way to Nos. 3 and 2 among all-time Americans in just two months.

Al and Jackie are looked well upon by nearly everybody, not just for their talent and success, but also for their easygoing attitudes.

Their goals for the future are simple: finish school. And then they aren't so simple: Al would like to become the first triple jumper to travel 18m (59- $\frac{3}{4}$) along with adding the 110 hurdles to his portfolio, and Jackie—whose goals must seemingly change almost every day—hopes to be the first heptathlete to tally 7000 points.

We talked with Al and Jackie after the ARCO Coliseum Classic, in which neither competed (Al's arrival was delayed because of personal matters in Jonesboro, and Jackie is nursing a sore hamstring). Kersee, Jackie's coach since 1981 and Al's coach last spring and summer, proffered his Culver City apartment for the interview:

T&FN: Al, what's the significance of the gold "Sweet H₂O" chain [see photo] you have around your neck?

Al: That's my nickname. I was a lifeguard in my hometown at the public swimming pool when I was 16 or 17, and I saved this little girl from drowning once. She was only about 7, but she and her friend had a little crush on me, I think—they used to always sit underneath my chair.

So they used to get outside the fence and yell, "Sweet man by the water!" And during that time, the lifeguards were making up nicknames and I didn't have one, but my friends heard those girls yell "sweet man by the water," so they started calling me "Sweetwater," and the name stuck with me.

Bill Leung, Jr.

T&FN: Is it true that you wanted to be a swimmer?

Al: Yes, a diver. I always wanted to go to the Olympic Games as a diver.

T&FN: Since last summer you two have become more famous. Give me some examples of some of the good things that have happened to you.

Al: I like to do a lot of functions for kids. Like there was this "Make A Wish" foundation for terminally ill kids back in Illinois and these kids could make a wish to see anyone in the world. One kid made a wish to meet me and Jackie. But at the time, Jackie couldn't make it because she was in school at UCLA so I made it there for both of us. And that was enjoyable.

To me, I don't feel too much has changed. It's been kind of busy, but nothing has really changed. I feel like people know my sister. They like to tease me by saying, "You're Jackie Joyner's brother." I guess they do it to upset me, but I'm not; I'm proud that she's my sister, and I'm her brother.

T&FN: Now this is interesting, because Jackie told me earlier that a lot of people come up to her and say, "Oh, you're Al Joyner's sister." It's not like people don't know who you are.

Al: But Jackie's very talented. She's been good ever since I can remember. Everybody said back home that Jackie was going to go to the Olympics. And they were shocked to see I made the team.

T&FN: Jackie, what was good for you?

T&FN: Jackie, what are your impressions of Al as an athlete?

Jackie: Well, I know he's come a long way. As far as an athlete, I think he's very talented. But... the only problem is... [joint laughter]. I just see so much in my brother that I don't believe he realizes it... I just don't think he's very disciplined. I don't see how a person can coach himself.

Kersee: He's not disciplined. If he ever settled down, if he was out here training with whoever he wanted to train with—it wouldn't have to be with Bob Kersee—Willie Banks's 57-11¼ would be broken by Al Joyner.

Al likes competing but he doesn't like training. He's enthusiastic and positive—he's got the mental ability to concentrate and do what it takes to get something done. But if he were a disciplined athlete—if he didn't always just strive for one high moment and had a consistency of training—he'd be one of the best triple jumpers this world has ever seen.

After the Olympic Games people came up and asked me, "Well what did you do to Al Joyner?" And I said, "I cannot take the credit for Al, except that I just slowed him down to where he trained. He had a set schedule."

Al: I agree with that except that I think I'm disciplined. I'm hardheaded and I may not be disciplined sometimes...

Jackie: Hardheaded? Stubborn is the word.

Al: But I want to listen. I think if I did come out and trained consistently, I think I would be the best. But I do agree with Bobby—I don't think you've seen the best out of me yet.

But there's a time when you have to think for yourself, and you have to make your decisions. And I'm the type who says, "Well, if I make a mistake, I want it to be my mistake—not someone else's."

Jackie: I think a lot of this has to do with nobody really getting a hold of Al. You see, when I got involved in track I really wanted to do it. And once I got involved, I wanted to be the best. Because when I was a dancer I wanted to be the best dancer.

Alfredrick Alphonzo Joyner was born January 19, 1960, in East St. Louis, Illinois, and is 6-1/168. Graduated from Lincoln High School of East St. Louis ('78) and Arkansas State ('83). Now competes for Athletics West. His triple jump PR of 56-4¾ puts him equal No. 6 on the all-time U.S. list. His PRs: 110H, 13.55 '85; 400H, 52.43 '83; LJ, 24-11 '83; TJ, 56-4¾ '84. His progression (with World and U.S. Rankings in parentheses):

Al: She was an outstanding cheerleader too. She did the fastest flip I've ever seen in my life. She could do cartwheels and then when she'd split, it would be straight—and that was unique. Some girls would do cartwheels real fast and then when they'd split they wouldn't go all the way down and it didn't look so good. But Jackie was perfect—like a gymnast.

T&FN: Were the people back home proud of you after the Olympics?

Al: They were really proud of us. They named a park after us in East St. Louis—it's called Al and Jackie Joyner Park, and it's in the neighborhood that we grew up in on the south side.

T&FN: Did they rename this park because you used to play there?

Jackie: They built it from scratch. There's a park right across the street from where we used to live, and that's where we used to do all of our training.

Al: It's funny, because this is how I knew people watched me in the Olympics. Everybody back home used to call me Alfredrick, but when I got back they were all calling me Al.

We gave the town a big plus, they said. See, there's a lot of violence there, but during the time of the Games there was no violence or crime.

T&FN: Were things really bad in East St. Louis?

Jackie: It's not that bad, but the article Life magazine did back in 1983 made it sound real bad.

Al: In a class once at Arkansas State they asked me where I was from, and I told them East St. Louis. And then he asked me how old I was, and I said 18. He said "Living to be 18 in East St. Louis is like living to be 85 in Jonesboro!"

T&FN: Was the town proud because someone from East St. Louis had achieved something?

Al: A lot of people from there have achieved something after leaving. Like Eric Wright of the San Francisco 49ers.

Jackie: And Kellen Winslow for the Chargers. A lot of good players.

Every city has violence, but I guess people focus on East St. Louis because it is a small community. But we grew up right in the violence. One time a man got shot right in front of my face.

Al: Yeah, I saw it—I was shining shoes. I almost had a heart attack.

Jackie: I was about 12 or 13, and we used to run up and down the block. This liquor store was right across the street and a bunch of weird things used to happen there. And this man was coming out of the store and he pulled this gun out and pow-pow.

Al: He was shot 7 times. Just like in the cowboy movies.

T&FN: Do people recognize you two a lot?

Al: The only time where a lot of people recognize us is back in East St. Louis. Sometimes—like right after the Games—we were, because we were still fresh in people's heads, but now not much. Once they hear our names, then something will click—"Ah, you have a sister."

One time—at Mt. SAC this year—the guy who let us in saw I was Al Joyner and says, "Oh, how are your brother and sister doing?" And I said, "They're doing fine!" It's funny but it doesn't make me upset—it just makes me strive harder.

And I was getting interviewed on live TV once and I was telling the guy that this year I want to earn a little respect. And the guy says, "What do you mean earn respect—doesn't anybody know who the bronze medalist is?" I told him, "That's what I mean—I won the gold!"

T&FN: Since you've become more famous, has anything outrageous happened to you—something you never expected?

Al: Yeah, this one charity auctioned me off. The charity raised $3000, and I was supposed to be at one kid's birthday party because they won the auction. And I was like, "Wow, me?"

T&FN: That's certainly different. Anything like that happen to you, Jackie?

Jackie: No, just weird letters.
Al: I get weird letters too. I've actually gotten letters from people asking me to marry them!

Jackie: Yeah, real strange. One guy wanted a picture of me in my running outfit.

Al: One girl from Holland wanted to kiss my medal. And signing that one lady's bra last year at the Hard Rock Cafe—that was really strange. □
