Harris A Victim?

The sudden ban of Danny Harris last week appears to be another chapter in the growing tension between USATF and the IAAF.

The IAAF still insists that it was never informed by USATF of Harris's reinstatement, despite the fact that USATF has released to the press a detailed chronology of its actions in the Harris case, including its notifications to the IAAF.

The crux of the debate, though, is whether USATF has the right to reinstate an athlete. "For four years we have held the position that if an athlete is suspended by our federation, it's up to our federation to say when he will be reinstated," said Ollan Cassell.

Cassell added that in recent years USATF has reinstated at least 10 athletes without any comment from the IAAF.

Primo Nebiolo has insisted, "The term of suspension cannot be decided by the federation of an athlete but only by our Council."

Nebiolo met with Bobby Kersee, Harris's coach, on the first day of the Goodwill Games and asked him to have Harris formally apply for reinstatement to the IAAF Council. The next meeting for the Council is in late October, but Nebiolo said that a fax vote on the issue might expedite the situation.

Said Nebiolo, "We have no anger against this boy and we are open to reconsidering."

Kersee has sent Harris back to the United States, in the hopes that he will be eligible to compete at Zürich. Said Kersee, "Danny has been a victim of the system."

Nebiolo About-Face

Last year, faced with demands from athletes that they share in the monies generated by the World Championships, IAAF head Primo Nebiolo stonewalled.

His basic stance was, "They should be content to run for the honor alone." Nothing ever came of a threatened Stuttgart boycott, although the grapevine insists that the IAAF had to pay miler Noureddine Morceli under the table to get him to appear.

Nebiolo's position has apparently softened, although he still feels that there will be no prize money in Göteborg next year. On the eve of the Goodwill Games he said, "I'm not against the idea, but it cannot be a decision only by us; it must be a decision by all the other world federations."

His rationale for including other federations is that if money is paid at Göteborg, then it would follow that it has to be paid at Atlanta in '96, and having track alone with such a policy would create problems.

A strong ally for the athletes was revealed in Oslo a few days earlier, when at a Golden 4 press conference Zürich impresario Res Brügger said that the performers should be paid. "Primo Nebiolo is against it, Juan Antonio Samaranch is against it," he said. "But it is time they opened their eyes and realized that the day is coming. It is inevitable."

Status Quo

Linford Christie is ailing and may miss the European Champs. He pulled his left ham at the London GP, where he placed 2nd to Jon Drummond. . .

Also injured are sprinters Gail Devers and Merlene Ottey, both of whom had to miss the Goodwill Games. . .

Decathlete Paul Foxson has been sidelined since his breakthrough 8234 in April with an injury to his pubis. He's considering Talence, but will only compete if he is "101% recovered," says coach Harry Marra. . .

No Goodwill long jump for Carl Lewis, who says that at this point of the season he is not prepared to compete on consecutive days. The announcement came after he finished a well-beaten 4th in the 100. He still plans to run the 4 x 100 relay on Friday, however. . .

Fans hoping to see new 10,000 WR holder William Sigei in the Commonwealth Games will be disappointed in the decision of the Kenyan federation to leave him and steeple world champ Moses Kiptanui off the squad.

The two did not show for the Kenyan Trials in Nairobi last week, along with Robert Kibet and William Tanui. The Victoria roster is composed largely of little-known athletes. "By their absence they are giving a chance to our young, budding athletes to prove themselves," said a Kenyan official. . .

Jan Zelezny withdrew from the London GP with a shoulder injury. "I don't think it's serious but I don't want to take any risks," says the javelin WR holder.
