Atlanta Tickets Pricey

Track fans aren't going to get much of a break in Atlanta. Games officials, wishing to maximize ticket revenues in the 85,000-seat stadium, have announced prices for track & field, which is considered one of the high-demand sports.

If the schedule, as expected, mimics Göteborg, there will be six morning and nine evening sessions. There may be some field-event finals staged with the morning sessions.

Mornings are scaled at $20 to $50, the first eight evenings at $45 to $75, the final evening at $75 to $250. So, the fan who wants all sessions, top category, might end up paying $1150, plus whatever taxes, ticket and mailing fees are added.

Organizers note that prices for World Cup soccer ranged from $25 to $475, $175 to $250 for the Super Bowl, $20 to $500 for the Kentucky Derby, so their ticket pricing (which runs the gamut from $6 for baseball prelims to $600 for top seats to the Opening or Closing) is in line with comparable U.S. sporting events.

That is little solace for the track fan who needs to see all of track, not just a couple of sessions.

About 20% of available tickets will be distributed first to the Olympic family and VIPs, corporate sponsors and foreign Olympic committees.

The general public's access to tickets will be similar to Los Angeles '84. Order forms will be available in the Spring of 1995 and high-demand tickets, i.e. tickets for which there are more orders than seats available, will be distributed on a (here's the dreaded "L" word) lottery basis.

There's a possibility that "season tickets" will be available for track and other sports, but details have yet to be announced. In 1984, a premium had to be paid for full sets of track tickets, and the cost was a bit over $1000.

Major 1994 100s: A Tight Rankings Battle Emerging

A quick scan of the year's top dashes shows that the top spot is still up for grabs. Leroy Burrell captured the World Record and six wins, but is 1-1 with Dennis Mitchell, who has six wins including the big Goodwill clash.
